

The Alliance With Gaia

Passage Eleven

Pegasus Healing

Thank you for sharing the journey and for reaching Passage Eleven, some of us have travelled far. We are all connected no matter what continent.

There is a message throughout the course, that can speak to each person as we move along through the Passages.

Our journey is from from head to heart developing our awareness of the interconnectivity of nature, of Gaia.

The change we want to see begins with ourselves. Its not about fixing anyone else or the world its about our everyday life. The journey from head to heart does not mean we throw out mental abilities and common-sense.

We just become more aware of how endless conceptual thinking an opinions restricts us, as does “treacly” emotions.

We move towards achieving greater clarity whatever our circumstances.
We experience the intuitive and rediscover limitlessness and creativity

Warm people in ordinary life:

I know a farrier with a warm heart with care and respect for the horses he works with, such a relief and healing for the animals.

I know a gentle lady who provides a loving home a sanctuary for her family which includes cats and a dog, she also has a job helping at a kindergarten.

I know a lady who works in IT. she does her best in often fraught situations to sooth and help, yet still cares for the animals and helps in practical ways where she can.

I know a man an electrical engineer who has given a loving home to two premature orphaned formerly sickly kittens now thriving cats.

I know a young lady who loves nature and also does her best to care for the animals she encounters some of whom have suffered much distress and sickness she never gives up in challenging circumstances.

I know a lady a school teacher who has a lovely connection with nature who teaches the children to have a care for nature, she also has a hearty laugh and spreads joy.

I know a lady who works for an extremely large international organization, yet she feels the call of nature and the joy of caring for the animals

I know a couple who are very gentle and respectful. Yet they are strong and have a deep care for nature, helping an owl in distress in their garden, also supporting care where possible of abused and neglected animals.

There are many known and unknown who have a care for nature and the animals and we connect with this.

Information helps us to develop, yet the matrix can be like a deluge with opinions and circular information. So we retreat, observe, discern and take responsibility for our own stance.

Let's see what Jane Goodall considered to be the world's foremost “expert” on chimpanzees has to say. Aged 81 and still working and travelling she undertook a study lasting 55 years on the social and family interactions of chimpanzees in Gombe Stream National Park Tanzania Africa

<https://vimeo.com/19111966>

I do not feel amassing a vast database of material about the animals and their behaviour, the “expertise” is the essence its her heart felt connection with the chimpanzees and her work to provide sanctuary and greater understanding of them.

Recognition and respect for them as sentient, intelligent, social beings.

Empathy and the currency of kindness transcends empirical studies and concepts.

Strong in the face of initial hostility by showing those with a cold intellectual approach that chimpanzees were not just numbers- “things” but beings. Jane was initially criticised for giving the chimpanzees names and not numbers!

Some view adult primates with disdain, their gait, uncovered “nether regions” animated expressions, fist clenching etc., yet it has been reported that we share 98.8% of our DNA with chimpanzees, they are one of our closest evolutionary relatives.

Chimpanzees use tools. communicate are loving, kind and also show aggression, violence, “gang warfare” “political manoeuvrings” just like humans!

We can recognize straight away in life that animals are beings and we are all connected.

Each person has their own way, Jane Goodall famous for her research, and great care of chimpanzees has a clear message and optimistic message in the video below.

Lets also have a look at some “retired” chimpanzees.

Humans can wreak havoc fear and destruction where they consider themselves superior, whether it be towards another group of humans or other animal beings.

We each determine our own stance, and we do not lock horns with those that consume and devour, all is made whole in the end.

We know that nature is a powerful force not to be underestimated. Sometimes we may experience that force.

We have another project for you from Theresa in the UK:

“Fire Ants – A Most Powerful Force of Nature

I decided to base my project on fire ants after an intense and vivid experience I had with them. I visited Panama and stayed on a small island just off the coast of the mainland for a few days. The island was idyllic with beaches, forest, woodland and many types of plants and trees. The island was inhabited by many types of animals and insects including howler monkeys and various species of small lizards. The monkeys howled at exactly 6am every morning so no alarm clock needed!

One evening was particularly beautiful. A cloudless, moonlit sky and the ringing, chirping sound of crickets filled the air. The beach was not far away and you could hear the sound of the waves crashing against the rocks. I felt drawn to go and lean against a tree. And so I did. What unfolded was an unexpected but powerful experience with nature.

The tree had a fire ant nest in it. And I ended being covered in fire ants. They were quickly swarming my feet and ended up in my hair, down my face, neck and back. Wherever they went, I was stung many times.

Unbeknown to me, I found I am highly allergic to them. There's no fire ants in the country I live in and there's no way I could've known my sensitivity to them beforehand. I now know why they are called fire ants. I literally felt like I had been doused with petrol and set alight.

After receiving some much appreciated help from a couple friends, I got the ants off me. But I was left with an intense itching, burning sensation where they had been. Very soon, all I could see were swirling purple, fractal energies of many different geometric shapes, patterns and codes. These were very beautiful and intense came in thick and fast.

I felt a doorway into other worlds had opened and I wasn't sure if I was in 3d or not. But at the same time, I began to feel quite ill. This lasted for a couple of hours and it was very intense where the energies faded. But the itching did not stop and I am so glad I had plenty of sting relief and cream with me. I got stung by the ants on two more occasions.

On the third occasion, it hit me like a ton of bricks. I had extreme swelling to my face, hands and feet. My heart rate was higher than usual, my left arm went numb and I felt very sick and unsteady. Although I could walk around albeit slowly and quietly peak to people, I did not feel well. The only thing I could do was to try to stay calm andbreathe. Slow deep breaths helped me stay grounded. It was quite an effort to keep my mind at bay. I was grateful for a lot kind assistance on that journey: seen and unseen.

As uncomfortable as I felt and a little fearful of this experience, I was grateful to have been shown many things. This was very challenging and humbling at the same time. Fire ants are a massive power of nature. For something that appears so small, in large numbers, fire ants are a devastating force of nature.

They are very aggressive creatures and will stop at nothing to protect themselves, their fellow ants and their nests against any intruders. They are considered a dangerous pest and in many countries farmers have had problems with ants killing livestock. Ants tend to walk in straight lines. If anything at all gets in their way, they swarm the obstruction very quickly.

Even apex predators such as jaguars have to be careful they don't infringe on fire ants. As challenging as my experience was with them, it was a very intense healing experience. The memory of that experience will stay with me for a long time."

Wing Note

One Member mentioned in a review session that they were not able to find in video 4, “Birds of Prey”, for Passage Eight the specific point where the young white owl uses its heart shaped facial disc to detect sound.

The point in the video is fleeting 2 seconds or so. In meditation training with Stuart Wilde he taught people to be alert to signs, symbols etc. which can flash by very fleetingly in the aluna.

Here is such an example in 3D though in essence everything is multidimensional. There is a lot of information in those 2 seconds or so. The owl for 2 seconds focuses on sound to tune into my presence thereafter it uses sight.

To assist we have made another clip, for you to see. Check carefully it's the very first part. On arrival we had no idea what if any connections we would be able to achieve for a video on our first and only visit. Ignoring falconry principles-(the control.. by “bribing” of captive birds with food) the aim was to just connect with the owl if it wished.

The cues given by me are visual, and auditory Ha! Ha!, were to ensure the very able cameraman missed nothing.

Questions

Q.1. Do you agree with Jane Goodall's message in the second video link?

Q2. Why is Frodo, the alpha male at Gombe National park unusual?

Q3. What differences did you notice if any between the sanctuary chimpanzees and those in the Gombe National Park

Q4. Play is very important for humans and many other animals including non-human primates. Can you give an example from the first video link?

What lies ahead after this Passage? Ah ha..
